Church Panels Compare Infanticide and Abortion

The concept of infanticide is at the same discussion level as abortion was 10 years ago, the president of a Lehigh Valley anti-abortion group said yesterday.

Richard J. Stone of Allentown, president of the local unit of Pennsylvanians for Human Life, said if abortion gains widespread acceptance, infanticide could follow as a "serious question for discussion and debate."

Stone made his remarks at an abortion seminar at Neffs Union Church.

The six-hour program was sponsored by the health and welfare commission of the United Church of Christ's Penn North-east Conference.

Dr. John R. Tisdale, a Methodist minister and psychology professor at Cedar Crest College, gave the keynote speech and concluded the session with an analysis of the major points of agreement among the panelists.

Stone said the only "logical" distinction between abortion and infanticide is that an unborn, un-seen child is killed in an abortion.

Infanticide is the killing of a child already born.

Several scientific and intellectual journals recently have published articles in which university professors and professionals "throw out their ideas" about infanticide, according to Stone.

Some of the articles Stone said he had read contemplated what might have to be done to children who are deformed or cannot make a valuable contribution to society.

Another said that infanticide might have to be a means of population control if over-population reaches hazardous proportions, Stone said.

"I don't know of anyone coming out and saying it's (infanticide) a great thing," Stone said. "But then pro-abortionists don't say abortion is a great thing either."

One woman member of the panel discussions told Stone that when Japan legalized abortion, it outlawed infanticide.

Tisdale said one study done in Sweden showed that children of mothers who had wanted, but had been refused abortions, were likely to become delinquents.

Mrs. Betty Baker, a member of Stone's organization, said a number of Protestant clergymen had performed a survey that disputed the findings of the Swedish study.

Tisdale summarized the conclusions of the various panel discussions with these impressions: "The act of abortion is uniquely personal and uniquely feminine." A man cannot conceive of the impact an abortion has on a woman.

Abortion involves "critical ethical questions." It also is one of a "chain of events," and the church should be aware of the psychological conditions that make a woman want to have an abortion.

One issue — whether abortions should be controlled legislatively — was not resolved during the course of the discussions, Tisdale said.

Tisdale commented in his opening address that "women commonly still have feelings of anger, guilt or shame" after they have had an abortion.

A-B-E Workers To Ratify Pact

Maintenance and parking lot employees at Allentown-Bethlehem-Easton Airport will meet at 4:30 p.m. today to ratify a contract worked out Saturday between representatives of Teamsters Union Local 773 and the Lehigh-Northampton Airport Authority.

The meeting will be held at the Quality Motel, MacArthur Road, Whitehall Township. About 25 persons will be affected by the pact.

Al Abruzzi, Local 773 president, said last night workers of TBA Supply Co., Emmaus, have already ratified a contract between the union and the company.

Agreement was reached Saturday and approved almost immediately, although company and union officers must still sign the pact.

The contract provides for a substantial wage increase, and institution of the Teamsters' pension, health and welfare programs. An improved vacation schedule and an additional holiday are included in the new contract.

The total package represents a 96-cents-an-hour gain for the warehouse workers and drivers of TBA. Before negotiations, drivers received $3.15 an hour and warehousemen $2.65 an hour.

The Rev. Dr. Webster K. Reinert, superintendent of the home, brought greetings from the staff.

City Man Held in Slaying Of Son, Wounding of Wife

The shooting took place shortly before 10:25 p.m. when police received the call.

A woman who lives next door to the Skurkies heard a scream and two shots. She had just stepped outside to see off a friend who had been visiting.

One other shot was heard by a woman who lives several doors from the Skurkis residence.

"The next thing I knew red lights were flashing in the alley," she said.

Police found the three in the living room of the house, it was reported. A good deal of blood was on the floor of the room.

The boy and Mrs. Skurkis were taken to the hospital in the police ambulance.

Police took the weapon, a small caliber foreign-made pistol, from Skurkis and helped him into a waiting patrol car.

Blood from his head wounds left a trail in the hallway of the house and on the narrow pavement outside on Hickory Street. The back of the Skurkis house faces Hickory Street.

Investigators later found what appeared to be a bullet hole in the front door window on Lumber Street. The slug had also torn the curtain. Bits of glass lay on the entry steps.

Skurkis was able to talk to investigators in the emergency room of the hospital.

Residents Lack Water

Whitehall Township, to tap one of the hydrants in Egypt. This source was used for the balance of the 8,000 gallons.

Deputies of the sheriff's office brought metal fittings so that fire company hoses could be connected to the storage tank inlet.

Mrs. Domrzalski said she telephoned Stewart Helfrich yesterday about the water crisis. Helfrich, one of the three supervisors, was chairman when the controversy erupted. He has since been succeeded by Harvey Remaley.

Mrs. Domrzalski said: "Mr. Helfrich was very irritated by my call. He said Sunday was his day of rest, that he didn't want to be bothered, and hung up."

The Cedar Vue Acres Homeowners' Association, headed by Donald Breslauer, maintains that the supervisors and the township solicitor have not used their authority to the full extent and have been overly lenient with Wiemand.

Atty. Morris Mindin of Bethlehem has been retained as the association's counsel. Saying that they have run out of patience with Wiemand and the township, the homeowners said yesterday they will probably ask Mindin to seek an injunction against the developer and the water company in county court.

Three women in the community gave birth recently and two are expecting. They say they do not have sufficient water to protect the health of their babies.
